

"Water, you have neither taste
nor colour nor aroma.
One cannot describe you.

One tastes you without knowing you.
It is not so that one does not need you to live,
you yourself are life!

You permeate us as refreshment,
whose delicacy cannot be expressed by our senses.

You do not accept just any mixture,
you do not tolerate every change.
You are a very easily offended deity!

But you give us an indescribably simple
and great happiness."

Antoine de Saint-Exupéry